ACCUSED KILLER
TALKS RAPIDLY
AS ALIBI GIVEN

Here's a man of composure!
T. H. (Dutch) Craig, Jr., comes down to the office here a good bit . . . he brings in his ads and stops every once in a while to talk or sit down and read a paper. The other day he was reading the Ohio State Journal (I can mention that at right—it's an AP paper) quite solemnly. He had his legs crossed, was smoking and relaxing.

I wasn't paying too much attention to him, when all of a sudden I looked up and saw a regular smoke screen billowing from the toe of his shoe.

"Hey, Dutch, your shoe's on fire," I yelled.

He jumped three feet . . . straight up, still in a sitting position . . . when he lit on the chair again, he stamped the fire out, folded his legs back the way they were and resumed his reading as if nothing had happened at all unusual.

I'm still wondering if someone was trying to give him a hotfoot.

William E. McKinney, Machinist's Mate 2-c, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. McKinney, 322 South North Street, is doing more than just fight this war . . . he hasn't been home for two years . . . not since he went out to sea soon after he enlisted February 3, 1942.

He is 21 years old now and has been saving a substantial percent of his pay . . . he sends it back home to be deposited in a bank and besides that, he buys War Bonds to give to his family . . . at Christmas he gave each of them a $25 bond . . . at other times he sends special War Bond gifts.

In a recent letter to his parents, he wrote: "How's that rationing getting along back there? Not much gas and stuff like that I guess."

He said not a word of the long hours he spends sweating in an engine room or the times his ship must have dodged torpedoes.

Just about the hardest working person in the first degree murder trial of James W. Collett is the court reporter, Miss Marie Melvin, who is on a constant strain to take the testimony and keep the court records straight.

Usually in such cases when good reporters are available, two and even three shorthand experts take the testimony, and transcribe it the same day it is taken.

Not only must Miss Melvin be on the alert constantly to get the testimony, but every available hour she uses in transcribing her notes.

For instance, while court was adjourned over Saturday and Sunday, she was busy typing from her notes, not only during the day time but much of the night, and she works over hours daily to keep her notes transcribed as fast as possible.

That just reminds me that Marie is one of the finest court reporters in Ohio, barring none. She is not only accurate and does speedy work, but her good nature is always manifest in filling the highly important post.

FINLAND REPLIES TO ARMISTICE DEMANDS

Toned-down Answer May Be Satisfactory To Russia

STOCKHOLM, March 9.—(P)—Finland has sent a revised reply to Russian armistice demands which may be a satisfactory basis for further negotiations, it was strongly indicated here today.

Aftonbladet said the reply should be acceptable from the Russian viewpoint and declared it had declared it had the backing of Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf von Mannerheim and other high Finnish military officers.

The reply originally was prepared for delivery last Friday, but apparently because of its sharp tone it was held back for revision and the final draft was not transmitted to the Russians until Tuesday.

Aftonbladet said modification was the result of objections raised in certain Swedish circles which persuaded the Finns to adopt a milder tone.

Plea for Lend-lease Extension Highlights Day's Events In Nation's Capital

WASHINGTON, March 9.—(P)—Navy Secretary Knox said today the Allies are "on the threshold of critical" offensives against the Axis which will dwarf all previous thrusts.

Thus, said Knox, this is the time for Congress to assure the partners of the United States that the final blow will be struck. That can be done, he told the House foreign committee, by continuing the lend-lease act which expires June 30. A three-year extension is being sought.

Appearing as the final witness at committee hearings, Knox said if it had not been for lend-lease "we would not be approaching the decisive battles."

Knox revealed that, under lend-lease, the U. S. has transferred 1,400 ships to the Allies, most of them to the British, though title is retained and they are to be returned when the war ends. Four thousand naval aircraft also were provided.

Reverse lend-lease doesn't compare in dollars with what the U. S. has handed out, said Knox, but it is a considerable contribution. As an example, the U. S. naval base in Britain has operated for a year "without making a single cash expenditure."

"It is my hope that the effectiveness and scope of the lend-lease act will not be cut down or restricted," the secretary added.

Federal Agencies

Federal agency heads—among them some of President Roosevelt's most trusted lieutenants—are beating a path to the Capitol today, apparently bent on healing the breach between Congress and the White House.

Stabilization Director Vinson and Price Administrator Bowles called on Senate and House leaders and Food Administrator Marvin Jones chatted with other lawmakers. Treasury Secretary Morgenthau—he vigorously opposed the tax bill which Congress passed over Mr. Roosevelt's veto conferred with Rep. Doughton (D-NC) and Senator George (D-Ga), chairmen respectively of the House and Senate tax committees.

Despite the maneuvering, a protracted battle over the bill to continue OPA in its present form appears inevitable. Anti-subsidy forces plan to seek the writing-in of an amendment which would end federal payments designed to keep food prices down.

TVA Under Fire

Acting Chairman McKellar (D-Tenn) of the Senate appropriations committee, longtime foe of the Tennessee Valley Authority, today charged the giant, government-owned agency with "outrageous" discrimination in the fixing of rates.

Federal Agencies

Senator Russell (D-Ga) predicts approval by the Senate appropriations committee of a measure prohibiting executive financing of agencies not now subject to congressional review. The proposal is aimed at blocking President Roosevelt's use of executive orders to create agencies operating independently of Congress.

Service Vote

A Senate decision on the long pending compromise servicemen's absentee vote bill was delayed further today when Senator Connally (D-Tex) announced he would not call it up until Monday because a number of interested senators are away from the capital.

Red Navy Strengthened By Seized Enemy Ships

LONDON, March 9.—(P)—Prime Minister Churchill said today disposition of "enemy or ex-enemy" fleets had best be left until the end of the war, but confirmed President Roosevelt's announcement that consideration was being given to reinforcement of the Soviet Navy by Italian or other warships.

German Capital Is Blazing Ruins After Five Daylight 'Saturation Bombings' in Week—Russians Slog Ahead In Mud But Fighting In Italy Slows Up After Heavy Losses Suffered by Nazis

(By the Associated Press)

Heavy American bombers attacked Berlin in waves again today, hurling new and destructive explosives about the ruins left yesterday when 125 German fighters were destroyed in violent combat.

It was the fifth daylight operation over Berlin by U. S. air forces in a week. Saturation bombings were carried out Monday and Wednesday during tremendous air battles. Fighters flew in offensive actions against the staggering German capital last Friday and on escorted the Fortresses and Liberators to the target again today. Great lakes of fire were started in Berlin yesterday.

U. S. Reserve Amazing

Today's attack demonstrated the amazing reserve strength in equipment and the endurance of the Eighth Airforce crews.

Strong forces of fighters from the Eighth and Ninth airforces escorted the bombers.

The first announcement gave no hint as to how today's bomber formations compared in strength with yesterday's raid on the German capital by at least 850 four-engined bombers.

First Berlin announcements failed to crow over the "great aerial battles" as during the previous American raids and today's formations may have reached the city with comparatively minor resistance from German fighters. It was certain that the German air arm was experiencing one of the most exhausting weeks of the war.

Nazi Plane Losses Heavy

U. S. headquarters in London said all four main buildings of the VWF ball bearing factory in Erkner, a southeast suburb of the burning capital, were bombed. Bombers destroyed 42 planes and fighters struck down 83, making the two day total of the Berlin attacks Monday and Wednesday 301—a serious subtraction in the air forces Hitler has been hoarding against the coming invasion.

Prime Minister Churchill told Commons "particular consideration" was being given to reinforcing the Russian navy with units of the Italian fleet. He said, however, the disposition of "enemy or ex-enemy" fleets had best be left until peace.

The U. S. lost 38 bombers and 16 fighters in the fires of Berlin visible 100 miles away yesterday. Stockholm said thousands were killed and hundreds of fires were kindled. The London Daily Mail said "the enemy's failure to stop this week's attacks on Berlin may herald the downfall of the German empire."

Reds Slog Ahead

The Russians said they destroyed 34 Nazi planes around Narva. Their troops in the Ukraine were reported slogging through mud within 11 miles of Proskurov and even closer to Tarnopol, important junctions on the severed Odessa-Lwow railroad. Their communiqué listed 3,900 killed; 100 Ukrainian settlements taken; and said the Germans were counterattacking bitterly and vainly to stem the Red tide toward Rumania.

The German army command in desperation has commandeered all available transport planes in a frantic attempt to save a large part of its mud-bound mechanized army in the southwestern Ukraine, Soviet dispatches said today.

The German-controlled Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau declared today the Russians had destroyed the ancient Estonian seaport of Narva in a night-long air attack Monday.

Russian forces previously bypassed Narva, which is off the Gulf of Finland, in their advance westward.

War Slows In Italy

Allied headquarters in Italy announced 7,500 Germans had died and 1,500 had surrendered at Cassino alone since the end of January, bringing total enemy losses there for that period to approximately 40,000. Patrols were active on all Italian fronts and two puny enemy attacks on the Anzio beachhead were repelled. Allied planes struck rail and shipping targets beyond Rome, destroying six German planes at the cost of nine. About 60 German planes attacked a convoy off North Africa but all ships escaped and five Nazis were felled.

Bitterest Opposition of Any Pacific Invasion Met When Americans Mop Up Fanatical Japs on New Britain

By RICHARD C. BERGHOLZ
(By the Associated Press)

Two Japanese counter-attacks in the Bismarck Sea campaign were reported in today's Allied communiqué. One, on Los Negros Island in the Admiralty group, was smashed, and the other, on New Britain's Willaumez Peninsula, is being bitterly resisted.

Veteran American Marine shock troops are fighting to hold their Willaumez Peninsula beachhead, established Monday, against fanatical Japanese counter-assaults. Associated Press war correspondent, Murlin Spencer, reported the landing met the bitterest opposition of any such operation in the Southwest Pacific and was accomplished without naval and air bombardment.

The Leathernecks are driving for the unused Talasea emergency landing strip five miles from the beachhead. The airstrip is 170 airline miles from Rabaul, main Japanese base on northeast New Britain.

NOXON MURDER TRIAL ENDS IN MISTRIAL

Electrocution of Mentally Deficient Child, Charge

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March 9.—(P)—The trial of John F. Noxon, Jr., 47-year-old corporation lawyer charged with murder in the electrocution death of his six-months-old mentally deficient child, ended in a mistrial today when Judge Abraham Pinanski suspended the trial because of the illness of a juror.

PORTSMOUTH SCHOOL STRIKES FOR PRINCIPAL

PORTSMOUTH, March 9.—(P)—Upward of 1,000 students remained away from class at the Portsmouth High School today in a growing protest against a school board decision not to renew the contract of Olin B. Smith, principal at the institution.

The walkout started yesterday when between 200 and 300 students left their classes. Only 160 reported for study today.

The students expressed determination to stay out until the school board held a public hearing on its decision.

Congressional Medal Of Honor Awarded Fightin' Yank Sergeant

WASHINGTON, March 9.—(P)—Technical Sergeant Charles E. Kelly, of Pittsburgh—is going to get the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Does he deserve it? Listen to the story the War Department tells about the fighting Irishman whose friends call him "Commando."

Last September 13, near Altavilla, Kelly, who is 23, volunteered as a member of a patrol which put out of action some enemy machine gun positions, at considerable risk of life.

After that he volunteered to establish contact with a U. S. infantry battalion believed located on a hill a mile away. The route he followed was under enemy observation, "sniper, mortar and artillery fire. But "Commando" got back with the information the Americans weren't there—the hill was occupied by the Nazis.

Next morning, when the Nazis resumed the attack, Kelly took a position at an open window where a machine gunner had been killed. There he "delivered continuous

ACCUSED KILLER TALKS RAPIDLY AS ALIBI GIVEN

Son Previously Had Said His Father Told Him He Had Killed 'Uncle Elmer'

White-haired James W. Collett, testifying for his very life, told the jury he never had an altercation with Elmer McCoy and was not in Fayette County the night McCoy and his family were wiped out in a blaze of gunfire.

Wearing his high neck brace, the hog breeder was called as the 13th defense witness in his trial on an indictment charging he slew his three relatives last Thanksgiving eve.

Very direct, sure of himself, but wincing frequently and feeling his injured neck, Collett was led by his counsel through a long list of ailments with which he was afflicted and came then to the night before Thanksgiving.

"Jim," asked defense counsel James N. Linton, "did you ever have any altercation with Elmer McCoy about anything?"

"Never in the world," Collett replied.

"Were you at Elmer McCoy's farm or in Fayette County the day before Thanksgiving?"

"No, I wasn't."

Collett testified he signed a confession admitting he killed Elmer McCoy only after he had been admonished, "Think of that little granddaughter."

Appearing as the 13th and last defense witness in his trial on an indictment charging he wiped out the McCoy family last Thanksgiving eve, Collett asserted his signature was put to a statement composed by Lt. George Eckerman of the Toledo crime laboratory after a full day of questioning.

Eckerman, Collett testified, had told him he knew of a similar case in which "someone . . . got a year and three months in an asylum" and remarked, "Wouldn't that be better than go through a nasty, dirty trial?"

And then, Collett said, Eckerman added:

"Think of that little granddaughter. That broke me down. I said you fix up something."

The hog breeder will return to the stand after the noon recess.

Mrs. Collett, who was called to the stand late yesterday after Thomas Collett, the couple's son, testified his father told him he killed McCoy, came back to the stand as the Thursday session opened.

The son, Thomas Collett, 29, like his father, a farmer, was on the verge of tears as he testified yesterday he could not remember all details of a conversation with his father following the killings because "I was so shocked to have my dad tell me he shot my Uncle Elmer." Later the elder Collett's wife wept on the witness stand.

Bowing his head and pressing the fingers of his right hand hard against his forehead, the son told of a conversation with the frail-appearing father last December 3, when the defendant came to his own farm to search for two guns used in the shootings.

"Dad, is this thing true, what came out in the papers?" Thomas said he asked his father.

"He said, well, it is true about Elmer but I don't remember about the women," Thomas testified. "I asked him what made him do such a thing and he said he had an idea of something about rent money he thought owed to my mother (by her brother, McCoy) and he went up there to try to make some arrangements and the next day when we were going up to the (McCoy) farm he thought it could be talked out. He said my uncle and he got into an argument and he (McCoy) grabbed his gun and he (Collett) grabbed another gun and shot him in the back."

As his son testified, the 60-year-old defendant slumped deep into his chair, gripped its sides and watched with half-closed eyes. The son never looked directly at his father.

As the defense developed its attempt to prove Collett could not have committed the slayings because he was miles from the McCoy farm at the time, Thomas

FEW CONTESTS SHAPE UP HERE FOR PRIMARIES

Drab Campaign Likely With Only Race for Republican
Sheriff Nomination

Prospects for anything resembling a spirited political tussle in the forthcoming primary election campaign in Fayette County were even more pale than for the past several years as the March 10 deadline for filing nominating petitions approached.

The Democrats have not been able to muster enough aspirants to fill the ticket—unless petitions have been taken out without anyone knowing it.

R. M. Winegardner, chairman of the executive committee, said that "so far as I know" there would be candidates for only three offices. W. H. Icenhower has taken out nominating petitions to seek another term as sheriff, Willis E. McCoy plans to seek another term as treasurer and Dr. N. M. Reiff will run again for coroner, the chairman said.

On the Republican side, there was little definite information as the committee chairman explained that "petitions we know nothing about could have been taken out" and reserved comment until after the petitions had been filed.

Members of the board of elections said it was impossible to tell who had nominating petitions because "they are not required to register when they take them out." They added the complete list would be made available "immediately after the petitions are filed."

Those in close touch with political developments, however, foresee a fairly full field of Republicans with Jean Nisley and Homer Miller out again for county commissioner, H. M. Rankin for Common Pleas Court judge, Robert E. Willis or engineer, Charles Fabb for treasurer and Mrs. Dorothy West for clerk of courts. The only contest now in the offing in for the Republican nomination for sheriff with at least five in the field—Virgil Vincent, W. N. Eckle, Albert Warner, Si Perry and James Jenkins.

The Democrats have selected J. J. Burris of Concord Township and W. M. Winegardner, candidate for the party's nomination for lieutenant governor, as candidates for delegates to the state convention and Virtus J. Kruse and E. A. Ellis as alternates. Nominating petitions are now in circulation.

The Democratic committee has given its unanimous endorsement to Winegardner for lieutenant governor.

COLLETT NOT AT MCCOY FARM, HE TESTIFIES AT TRIAL FOR MURDER

Collett testified he met a car he believed was driven by his father near the elder Collett's farm at 9:30 P. M. Thanksgiving eve.

Testimony has indicated the shootings took place between 8:30 and 9:30 P. M., and the defense has been setting up an elaborate time chart to show Collett at that time was near his home, 38 miles from the McCoy place.

Witnesses testified Collett's car had traveled only 55 miles from the time its oil was changed several hours before the slayings until Friday, November 26. The round trip to the shooting scene over the route the state contends Collett followed is approximately 90 miles.

Collett went on the stand at 9:50 A. M. Thursday, in his own behalf, and under direct examination by Linton, old friend of the family, declared he had never had a quarrel with Elmer McCoy and was not at the McCoy farm the night of the murders.

Collett was calm and collected, never at a loss for words, and talked so rapidly that time after time he was asked to slow down so the court reporter could take all of his constant flow of words.

He spoke in a clear voice that could be heard all over the court room. He wore the plastic collar which was brought to him in the county jail here soon after his imprisonment, by his son. His coat was unbuttoned and vest open, giving a full view of the collar, which fits about his neck, rests upon his shoulders a few inches above his neck and has a chin rest.

Under questioning by Linton, Collett said he was 60 years old, is a native of Clinton County and was a member of the Epworth League or had been when younger; the Farm Bureau, Grange, Masonic Lodge, Methodist Church, and was married Sept. 21, 1919, one child, Thomas, being born to him and Mrs. Collett.

Once started, Collett proceeded with an almost incessant flow of words to narrate his ailments, tell where he was the night of the triple murders and give other information.

He testified that his health had not been the best, and that 28 years ago he was crushed against a manger by a horse and his right shoulder and chest injured. He had not had complete use of his right arm since, he said. He fell from a load of hay in 1938 and sustained head and neck injuries which had caused him much suffering, he declared.

He had just told of the team attached to the wagon load of hay being "a quick team" when he was asked to talk slower so the reporter could take his testimony. "I guess I'm too quick, too," he said in an aside to the court reporter, with a chuckle.

Continuing his narrative Collett testified that:

He gets tired if he works too long and must rest, usually an hour or only 30 minutes is as long as he can work without fatigue.

He wears the plastic collar nearly all the time, and never goes an entire day without it unless sick.

He had been treated for goiter and left with nervousness.

Had many teeth pulled;

Was treated for arthritis;

Had osteopathic treatments by Dr. Vandervort, Wilmington, and that nervous trouble made taking of tonic necessary.

He had never had any trouble with Elmer McCoy at any time, and was not at the McCoy farm Thanksgiving eve, he declared.

Continuing his recital, he declared that:

On November 24 he shot pigeons at home of neighbor;

Took manure spreader to chicken house so his wife could clean it out;

Ate noonday dinner at home;

Got oil changed in his car in Wilmington and later returned home.

A load of gravel on his drive was spread by his son, Collett stated, while he went ahead with the feeding, and after supper he looked up his hunting coat and equipment in the basement and donned the hunting coat.

Then he went to Harveysburg, he said, to see about some hog feed and found the store closed.

It was about 7:30 P. M. when he left home, he said. In Harveysburg, he said he went to the barber shop, then to a garage and after a short time started home, but his car developed motor trouble soon after he left, and he turned back to have repairs made.

The car finally stopped, he said, at the roadside near the intersection of Route 73 and 380, where he "jostled" the wiring. He finally got in his car and rested on the back seat, and as he arose, he said he struck his nose on the wheel and caused it to bleed.

A car came toward Wilmington, he said, and the driver told him he had gotten off the CCC highway, and asked the way back to the CCC highway. They pushed his car for him, he said.

He said he went back and got a pair of pliers he had dropped in a churchyard where he had been working on the car.

Another car came from the west and pushed him nearly a quarter of a mile, and his car seemed nearly all right, he said.

At corner of Routes 73 and 380 two cars were waiting, he testified, and saw one car was that of his son, so he drove home, parked his car and discovered a gray mare was sick in the barn. Court recessed at 10:30 for 15 minutes.

Mrs. Collett On Stand

The first witness Thursday morning was Mrs. James W. Collett, whose testimony had not been completed Wednesday afternoon.

It was plainly a real effort for Mrs. Collett to testify, although she maintained her composure on the stand.

"Did you ever observe the conduct of your husband to indicate his mind was confused," she was asked by Kirk.

"Yes," was her reply.

"Eighteen months or two years ago in the winter, he hitched a horse to the fence half way up the lane, came home and sat down and said he could not take it, and that he was going to see a doctor, so he got his car and drove away," Mrs. Collett testified. She also said her husband's mind did not seem to be clear at times.

"One day," she said, "I saw Jim feeling along the yard fence. I went to him and he said he could not see. I brought him in and he laid on the couch for a while."

(Collett's head was hung as his wife testified, and he did not look at her.)

Continuing further, Mrs. Collett stated: "Many times I noticed he would say the wrong thing instead of the right thing and he said he could not help it."

The long and rambling story told by Collett on the witness stand before the jury, was resumed Thursday morning at 10:45 when court reconvened after a short recess.

Under the questioning of his chief counsel, James Linton, the defendant told of events on the evening of Wednesday, November 24, the night before Thanksgiving. He stated that after returning from Harveysburg and noticing his son's car on the highway, he had found a sick mare at the barn at his home. Without seeing or waking his wife who slept in the bedroom upstairs, he called Dr. Myers, the veterinarian, about giving the horse some medicine, he testified, and Dr. Myers had given him instructions.

He described in detail his alleged movements until the time he went to bed, mentioning that while he was waiting around he went into the hay mow to "kill pigeons" that had been bothering him. He also described his movements the next morning when he, his wife and his son Thomas and family all went to the Elmer McCoy farm home near Bloomingburg. He said that when they arrived and there saw an ambulance standing outside he was worried, thinking that Elmer might have caught his hand in the feed grinder.

His attorney took him back to recount his movements on the Saturday previous, when he and his wife and his son Thomas and family had been at the McCoy home and had been doing some hunting. He related that McCoy had urged them to come back the following Thanksgiving day or the Friday or Saturday, not Sunday, after that, so they could have a visit with Mildred who would go back to her school teaching work early Sunday afternoon.

Collett then told of the following Tuesday while he and Mrs. Collett were at the home of Dr. McCoy in Washington C. H., the sheriff had come to see him to interview him about the killing of the McCoy family and had taken him back to the jail for some further questions. He said he told the sheriff and also Prosecutor Hill who joined them, the same story of his movements that he had here related. Prosecutor Hill said he had to do some checking of the story and then the sheriff talked to him later that night, saying that the stories of the time he had seen his son did not check with what his son had told them. After a lot more talking Collett had agreed to a lie detector test and they had gotten in an automobile that night. Collett then again repeated his story given previously on the stand when the jury had been excluded, about some newspaper man who seemed to be drunk who got in the car with him and that "Prosecutor Hill was in about the same shape." He said the sheriff indicated to him that the newspaper man was to undergo a lie detector test also. He said that after they all got in the car he had heard Prosecutor Hill lean over towards the sheriff and say, "I guess you're right, about this. We have to pin this on this bird so you can be re-elected."

"I thought we were going to Columbus," Collett said, "but when we kept riding so long I asked the Sheriff if we were going to stop in Columbus and he told me we were going to Toledo."

He told of arriving in Toledo and learning for the first time that the man in the rear car seat with him was a newspaper man. He said that he asked the sheriff up there if he thought it was fair in an important case like this to take him up there with a bunch of drunks.

Collett then repeated the story he previously had told about his session with the detectives Eckerman and Eggert, about the lie detector tests, and of the persuasive efforts of Lt. Eckerman to get him to confess to the shooting of Elmer McCoy. The witness told in detail of the alleged conversation with Eckerman who conducted the tests and of Eckerman's suggestions that he was likely to be "framed" if he did not take the "short cut" and sign a paper that he would not get anything worse than he another man he knew, in a similar case, who only was given a year and three months in an asylum; that he (Eckerman) could get the judges of Clinton and Fayette Counties together with the prosecutor and his doctors and everything could be fixed up behind closed doors without any publicity.

In his story on this occasion Collett added the remarks that he had insisted that "that wouldn't help matters" and that he had told Eckerman that he wanted to wait and for him to call Jim Linton (Collett's chief counsel) at Columbus before they went any further.

He related that Eckerman kept talking to him about "being man enough to save his family" and keeping his son from being implicated, that a political fix was after him and "had the wheels under him," that Prosecutor Hill wanted to be elected a judge and that "don't think your friend Icenhower wouldn't step over your dead body to be re-elected," until he was worn out. He said that Capt. Eggert once had come in from Harveysburg and had been with him with questions and urged him that he would be wise to sign something and "save himself a lot of trouble." He said that when he wanted to leave several times he had been told to wait, that "they would be through very soon" and once Eggert had said to him if you don't stay in that chair we'll have to get rough with you."

Finally, Collett said, he gave in and told Eckerman to "go ahead and fix up something." It was then, the witness said that Sheriff Icenhower was called in, with a stenographer, and that Eckerman, just before they came in, had told him what could be said to show motive which Eckerman said "Hill would have to have in order to agree" to all the alleged arrangements for the meeting Eckerman had told him would get him off easily.

Collett, heard his own son, Thomas, testify that he had told him "I killed Elmer but I do not know about the women."

This damaging admission was made by young Collett while being questioned by Kirk for the defense. Suppressed excitement ran like an electric shock through the crowded court room.

In making the statement Thomas corroborated the evidence of Sheriff Icenhower and Detective Eggert who had previously testified he had made such a statement when he saw his father on the home farm in Clinton County in custody, the first day the officers sought to locate the guns used in committing the murders.

Thomas testified he first said to his father:

"Dad, is this true what the newspapers say?"

"It is true about Elmer but I do not know anything about the women," he quoted his father as replying.

"I asked him what made him do such a thing, and he said something about rent money and a quarrel with Uncle Elmer; that Uncle Elmer grabbed for a gun and Dad grabbed a gun and shot him in the back," Thomas testified.

"Then I asked him if it was him I had met at the crossroads that night and he said it was," Thomas continued.

As his father was ready to leave after a futile search for the guns near the Collett home, Thomas said he asked his father if he had any money, and when he said he had some, he gave him $25. He quoted his father as saying as he was preparing to leave, "something about he had done the best he could, had worked hard and if he had gotten the rent money would have got more land." He said "I was so shocked when Dad told me he had shot Uncle Elmer I could not remember everything."

Thomas told his story composedly, although it appeared a bit reluctantly at times. His father showed little emotion except a tightening of the lines about his mouth.

The defense finished with the witness immediately after these statements, and Prosecutor Hill started cross-examination, but did not question him at length, or ask him anything more about his conversation with his father.

Hill questioned Thomas about the length of time he and his father had hunted on the McCoy farm the Saturday prior to Thanksgiving, and was told about five hours. Thomas had a double-barreled shotgun and his father an automatic shotgun, he said.

The automatic was produced from back of the judge's bench. Judge Rankin took the gun and opened it, then replaced it after it had been identified by Thomas as the gun carried by Collett in hunting.

Under questioning by Hill Thomas testified "Aunt Forrest said Mildred would be home Thanksgiving day" during a conversation at the McCoy place Saturday before Thanksgiving.

Thomas also stated that he asked his mother to call the McCoy home between 5 and 6 P. M. Thanksgiving Eve and tell them they (the Colletts) would be up to hunt Thanksgiving Day. His mother later told him she had called, he said.

He said, "Dad had not gone to Harveysburg" when he went home 7 to 7:30 P. M. and that he ate supper, played with his little girl a while, read the newspaper, listened to the radio and then went to his father's home and to the workshop to grind knives for a corn shredder. This work took him an hour or more, he said, and he reached home at 9:30 to 9:45 P. M. to the best of his recollection.

Young Collett, at the opening of his testimony under the questioning of Kirk, defense attorney, said he is 29 years old, married, has one child and that his wife is in poor health. He resides on Route 380, 1½ miles from his father's home which is a half mile east of the Harveysburg Road or Route 73, intersection, seven miles from Wilmington. He is a farmer, school bus driver, does custom corn picking and helps operate a corn shredder, he added.

He was questioned in detail for some time until the state's attorneys offered a series of objections due to the slowness of the examination.

Hunting on the Elmer McCoy farm the Saturday before Thanksgiving was gone over, and the friendly spirit between the Colletts and McCoy's stressed. Thomas said his father paid Elmer for some coke he had obtained for him and that Elmer had asked them to come back Thanksgiving Day. They agreed to let him know if they could do so, he said.

He was asked to tell what he did on November 24 and when and where he saw his parents.

In the evening he said he spread a truck load of gravel in the drive at the home of his parents until dark, helped feed and went home after dark, about 7 to 7:30 P. M. Both parents were at home when he went to supper, he said. He returned to his parents' home about 8:30 P. M., he said, talked with his mother, but did not see his father, then went to grind the shredder knives, worked about an hour, then went home. He did not see his father, he declared. En route home, he said he saw a car at intersection of routes 73 and 380 which was coming from Harveysburg, and waited for it to pass. He testified he thought it was his father's car and "honked."

His father aroused him Thanksgiving morning before daylight, he said, and told him to get up so they could go hunting. He said he was told that a gray mare had been sick during the night but was better.

Because his father told him his car was out of order, they made the trip to the McCoy farm in his (Thomas') car he said, and arrived at the McCoy farm just before the funeral director placed Elmer's body into the ambulance.

Regarding Collett's health, his son said it had not been good since he fell from a load of hay in 1938; "that's the reason he wears the collar". His right arm had been affected for years, he said, so that in combing his hair he supported his right arm with his left hand on his right elbow.

Questioned by Kirk he also said his father had had lapses of memory and had talked with him about it in the past two or three years, saying he had told him that sometimes for a half hour or half a day he could not recall what he was doing.

He was then asked what happened Friday, December 3 and told of his conversation with his father regarding the killing of Elmer McCoy and Mrs. McCoy and Mildred.

Gerald Stevens on Stand

Gerald Stevens, 514 E. Paint Street, employee of the Pure Oil Company plant on Market Street, was called to the witness stand before Thomas Collett was called. He said Collett had his car serviced there November 26, the day before the triple funeral of the McCoy family, and identified a service slip showing mileage of 11,712 recorded by the speedometer, some 47 miles more than the reading of Collett's speedometer the afternoon before the crime was committed, as recorded in Wilmington.

Cross examination by Leis was brief. He asked the witness if he had checked the speedometer to see if it had been tampered with, and the answer was no.

When the defense called for George W. Mindling, Columbus, to be placed on the stand, he was not present.

Wife Takes Stand

Mrs. Collett saw her husband for the last time Thanksgiving Eve after they had eaten their supper between 7 and 7:30 P. M., she testified late Wednesday afternoon.

"I didn't know where he was going," she said.

She said she "woke up about midnight that night and saw a light in the barn." She opened a window to call out to see if it were her husband and then went back to bed, she said, after he had answered.

Mrs. Collett read excerpts from Forrest McCoy's diary to help the defense show friendly relations over a long period between the two families. Nearly a dozen state objections were climaxed when Defense Attorney Linton said of the diary: "It is evidence of the affection of the dead, who cannot speak for themselves, for the Colletts, who can." Mrs. Collett herself said the two families "visited back and forth quite often and always have."

The Colletts, with Thomas, his wife and little daughter, visited the McCoy's the Saturday before Thanksgiving and "had a good time visiting the whole day," Mrs. Collett said. She said the men went hunting.

Mrs. Collett testified her husband came in "I don't know how many—about a dozen times a day"—to take off his plastic collar and rest. She asserted his neck injury seemed to be growing worse the past few months.

The "finest Christmas present I ever got for Mildred," which Collett spoke of when he was told of the McCoy family's death, was a picketbook, Mrs. Collett said.

Mrs. Collett was near tears only once during her testimony when she described the first things she saw as they drove to the McCoy farm Thanksgiving morning. "As we turned in the gate... the first thing I saw was Mr. Hook's ambulance," she said, then stopped as her lips trembled. The questioning along this line was not pursued further.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

When word came through that our Yankee airmen had dumped 350,000 incendiaries and 10,000 high-explosive bombs into an already shattered Berlin I was pondering the implications of the protest by some groups in America and Britain against so-called "obliteration" bombing of German cities.

A wise-cracking editor called across the room to me, "that ought to burn the Fuehrer up." Bad puns sometimes carry great truths, and I promptly seized on this fresh bombing as a yardstick against which to measure the reasonableness of the plea that Hitlerite towns be spared. What's the justification for the assault on Berlin?

Well, there are two prime reasons, either of which is of vast military importance. One is that the capital is among Europe's industrial cities and therefore one of Hitler's chief centers for war production. The other and even more important reason is that Berlin is the hub of Germany's huge network of railways, and prior to the war the Reich was operating a greater mileage than any other country in the world, in proportion to area.

Berlin is more than a railway "hub." It's a bottle-neck for most of the main lines running across not only Germany but Europe. Obviously this bottle-neck renders Hitler highly vulnerable. He must keep it open, for without transportation for his supplies and troops he is sunk. That's something to remember well as the Allied invasion of Western Europe approaches, and the Nazis need speedy communication between their Eastern and Western Fronts.

An important point about Berlin—and this is true of some other cities—is that the entire metropolis is filled from circumference to center with military objectives. If you wipe out these objectives you must just about destroy the town.

Transportation is one of Germany's weakest points. That's Hitler's fault. When he was preparing for war he allowed his infallible intuition to persuade him to neglect the railroads in favor of the mighty military highways which he built. It never occurred to him that the time would arrive when he would lack gas and rubber tires to keep his motor transport speeding over his beautiful autobahns.

He finally was compelled to place his main dependence once more on the despised railways and canals. By that time the roads had run down and their rolling-stock was in bad shape. So the Allied bombers went after the railways, and the locks and other vulnerable parts of the canals. Those canals are important, for Germany has been one of the world's greatest users of this form of transport.

But to get back to our muttons, as our English friends say, a dozen main railway lines run into that hub which is Berlin. There's a ringbarn, or outer circle of railway round the city, and this is an integral part of an ingenious system connecting the terminals of the main lines.

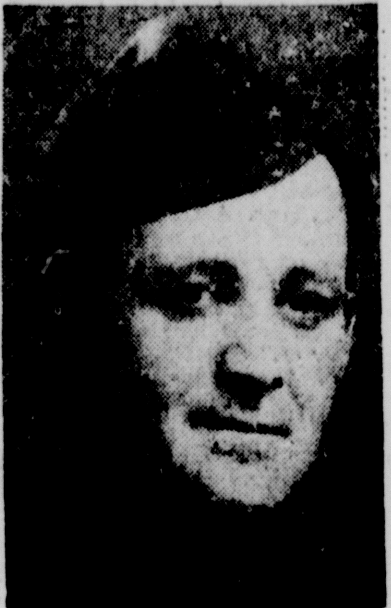

So with its railways and widespread industries Berlin is one vast military target. When Ameri-

Sgt. Ted Yoakum, now convalescing from a shrapnel wound in the right shoulder at Fletcher General Hospital, Cambridge, will be starred as a speaker when the Red Cross War Fund drive for $28,500 gets underway next Sunday afternoon with a Victory Sing in the high school auditorium.

seas, first in England and then in North Africa, Sgt. Yoakum saw some of the first bitter fighting in Tunisia.

It was there that a piece of shrapnel tore into his shoulder and ploughed up through his ribs and came out the back of his neck. He was wounded when German JU88's strafed troops bivouaced on a North African plain.

A victory sing, the last in this season's series, is scheduled to begin Sunday at 2:30 P. M. in the high school auditorium. Paul Fitzwater, director, has worked out a program of patriotic songs and special numbers.

can and British bombers attack the Nazi capital they aren't trying to bomb objectives which aren't of military importance. Most certainly they aren't hunting civilians. I know from personal acquaintance with their methods that they studiously try to avoid non-military bombing.

If civilians and historic monuments are in the way in Berlin—that's the war which the Nazi dictator forced upon the world. Berlin is the key position from which he has caused the slaughter of millions, military and civilian—from which he literally has enslaved many millions more.

Berlin is the chief citadel which stands between the Allies and victory.

ous aimed and effective fire" until his rifle locked from overheating, whereupon he found another and kept up his shooting until the same thing happened to that one.

There wasn't another rifle handy, so Kelly picked up some 60mm mortar shells, pulled the safety pins, and used the shells for grenades, killing at least five Germans.

"When it became imperative that the house be evacuated," the citation continues, "Corporal Kelly, despite his sergeant's injunctions, volunteered to hold the position until the remainder of the detachment could withdraw. As the detachment moved out, Corporal Kelly was observed deliberately loading and firing a rocket launcher from the window. He was successful in covering the withdrawal of the unit, and later in joining his own organization."

The citation ends there, with a bow to Kelly's "fighting determination and intrepidity in battle." But "Commando" hadn't stopped there. After firing the last bazooka shell, he slipped out of the storehouse, and made cautious steps down a hill, found an abandoned 37 mm anti-tank gun, and so as long as the shells lasted, stayed with that gun, too.

That was at Altavilla. Kelly was at San Pietro, too, as a corporal—the citation for the earlier actions was written while he was a corporal—and then as section sergeant. He has fought at Cassino, also. He's had a total of 70 days of active combat, and his only injuries have been a scraped nose and some tiny cuts on his hands from shell fragments. Officially he's credited with killing 40 Germans. Unofficially, he has become a legend of the Italian campaign.

Mis mother, Mrs. Irene Kelly, 532 Shawano St., Pittsburgh, has six other sons in the fighting forces, too.

RED NAVY STRENGTHENED BY SEIZED ENEMY SHIPS CHURCHILL ALSO REVEALS

"As President Roosevelt has said, the question of the future employment and disposal of the Italian fleet has been a subject of some discussion and in particular consideration has been given to the immediate reinforcement of the Soviet Navy, either from Anglo-American or Italian resources," he said.

"It may well be found that the general question of enemy and of ex-enemy fleet disposal should best be left over to the end of the war against both Germany and Japan when the entire situation can be surveyed by the victorious Allies and they can decide what is right and just to be done," he continued.

He added no details, however, to President Roosevelt's statement of March 3 that negotiations were about half completed for transfer or roughly one-third the Italian fleet to Russia except to say that no change was contemplated now in arrangements with Italian naval authorities under which Italian ships and crews take part in the war in the theaters where they now operate.

planes darted through the night, a cluster of troop-filled enemy barges attempted to land on Los Negros Island Tuesday, Gen. Douglas MacArthur communicated. But American artillery caught the barges off-shore and every landing attempt was repulsed.

Sixteen more Japanese ships have been bagged by American submarines, the Navy reported today, raising to 627 the number of enemy vessels sunk by submarine action alone.

One large tanker, five transports and 10 cargo ships comprised the latest announced toll on Japan's hard-hit shipping. Including all actions by ships and planes as well as submarines, 1,989 enemy vessels have been sunk since the war began.

Allied forces leap-frogging up the coast of New Guinea have strengthened their positions west of Saur and are now 23 airline miles from their objective, Madang.

South Pacific planes, some springing from the newly-carved Allied airfield on Green Island at the north tip of the Solomon islands, pounded Rabaul with 55 tons of bombs, hit Kavieng, New Ireland with 62 tons, and raked other targets throughout the Bismarck Archipelago.

In Burma, American forces under young Brig. Gen. Frank Merrill have killed 650 Japanese since they entered the Burma fight, against a loss of seven killed and 37 wounded. Lt. Gen. Joseph Stilwell said enemy casualties in the Hukawng Valley, where Americans are fighting, have reached 2,309 killed.

For the sixth time, Japan's installations on Paramushiro on the northern Kurile islands were raided Sunday, Pacific fleet headquarters reported. Other planes dropped 31 tons of bombs on enemy bases in the eastern Marshalls Monday.

Regular religious services are conducted on small U. S. naval vessels by the commanding officers.

Wan Pill Rollers Roll Own Aspirin

NEW ORLEANS—Albert Lauve, head of the pharmacy department at Charity hospital, said his assistants manufacture some 3,500,000 pills a year for hospital use.

Lauve estimated that by producing the hospital's glucose alone, his department saves $180 a day. His idea of a restful, soothing sight after watching pills hop jerkily from a pill machine at the rate of 6,000 an hour, is a batch of golden-smooth cough syrup.

"It's a hard job," he said. "Very exacting. But then, we make our own aspirin."

Today's Horoscope

Although spiritually inclined, you enjoy outside interests of the higher type. Your home life is very dear to you. You are a good and careful planner, a real leader and have the faculty of being able to interest others in the things that interest you. You would make a devoted parent. During the next 12 months be guarded in speech and writings, and curb impulsiveness. Keep the nervous system toned up, and refuse needless risks and worry. Born on this date a child will be very high-strung, thus requiring abundant rest and fresh air. Much patience will be necessary to obtain maximum success.

of course, to insist that there be such plans ready when the time comes.

Civic groups likewise are beginning more and more to study ways to make this city and country better places in which to live.

But individuals, too, have a responsibility. It is their task, too, to help maintain the present scale of living.

If individuals are to do their part toward preservation of our way of living they must continue to save, through bond purchases and in other ways.

Savings will help avert further inflation, which would undo all that has been done in the past 50 years to build our living standards up to their present basis.

Perhaps even more important, maintenance of the present living conditions in a post-war period depend very definitely on industry's ability to keep employment at a level which will provide income for all. Of course some women will drop out, many youths will go to college, and many workers are awaiting the end of the war to retire.

But industrial wheels must keep turning if payrolls are to keep flowing.

These wheels will turn if there is purchasing power to buy the goods they turn out. And this purchasing power will be available only if part of today's earnings are laid aside by individuals. This purchasing power will help tide the nation over a possible gap while war-busy industry changes the direction of its wheels, and will create the demand for post-war goods which is necessary if we are to avoid a slump.

Individuals have their part in post-war planning, too. Money earned now can be earmarked by them for post-war uses, just as much as industry's earnings can be earmarked. More, in fact, for industry's excess profits tax is compulsory, and the excess profits of individuals can be squandered or saved as they see fit.

Uncle Sam has imposed rules on industry and has put individuals on the honor system, at least so far as excess profits are concerned.

It is up to all of us to prove ourselves worthy.

Period of Danger in Whooping Cough

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IN JANUARY, when whooping cough is at its height in the Northern States, I discussed the new treatment of the disease with adrenal cortex. Now, in March,

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

when it is at its height in the Southern States and the period of convalescence is on in the north, I want to discuss the contagiousness of that period. Convalescence is the most important stage of whooping cough for the rest of the community because that is the time it is spread to others.

Long Convalescence

Whooping cough has a long convalescence. And the best place for the whooping cough patient is the open air. And if he goes into a park or on the street to play, other children come around. To protect them is by no means easy. Dr. Bauer, of the American Medical Association, tells an amusing story which illustrates the fate of the best laid plans. He conceived the idea that if a child who was allowed to go into the park during the convalescent stage, wore a yellow placard labelled "Whooping Cough," the other children would be warned. But what actually happened was that the curiosity of all the other children was aroused and they crowded around the whooping cough convalescent.

I agree with Dr. Bauer that—"There is altogether too much exposure of babies in public places." They are exposed to whooping cough, colds, measles, scarlet fever and chicken pox. Babies belong at home. This time of year the movies is no place for a baby. If the parents cannot exist without amusement, they must get someone to stay with the baby at home. Neighbors can take turns with each other's babies.

The prime reason for this is that whooping cough in a baby under four years of age is no joke. The death rate is high. And there are other dangers. The vomiting which comes at the end of a paroxysm can weaken the child so that its nutrition is seriously undermined. In young babies, loss of water from the body from the diarrhoea and vomiting may present a grave complication. The coughing may produce a hernia, or a haemorrhage into the eyeball or even the brain, and pneumonia from extension of the laryngitis and bronchitis takes its toll. From four to nine it is less dangerous. And after nine it is rare, but no age is immune from contagion. Even old age. The old catch question—"When Johnny brings whooping cough home from school who is most likely to get it?"—is answered: "Grandpa."

Use of Vaccines

Substantial protection against whooping cough is given by the use of vaccines. They do not operate in the hundred per cent fashion of smallpox, typhoid and diphtheria, but they are good enough so that most pediatricians add them to the list of these old standbys "musts." Since whooping cough is most dangerous in very young children, they should be given it at the age of six to nine months. Immunization is established before birth if the mother is given vaccines.

Whooping cough is pre-eminent in the disease that is spread by an air-borne infection—by droplets. Its spread through the civilized world is an interesting study in epidemiology. First definitely described in France, in 1578, it spread to the then next most civilized country, England, and an epidemic was described by the great Sydenham, in 1670. (Civilization here implies lack of isolation, free social intercourse between village and village, town and country.) It did not appear in Germany until 1742, and soon after that in America. New Zealand had its first case in 1847, and Australia not until 1890.

A Model is Murdered ~ BABS LEE

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

The Pine restaurant on Second Avenue doesn't boast of a smart decor but it is credited by many with having the best steaks in town. There is sawdust on the floor and on the walls are hundreds of cartoons by nationally famous artists who have dined there.

Argus and Ellen were in luck. They secured a table after waiting only half an hour, in the course of which they had a couple of cocktails at the tiny bar, where customers crowded three deep.

"Buy a paper, mister?" asked an urchin waving a pink edition of the Blade at Argus.

Argus handed him a dime and told him to keep the change. On the front page was the picture, the one that was taken in Flagg's office with the four models and Ellen. The caption read: Argus Steele Seeks Clue to Model Murder Mystery.

"I'll bet a lot of my friends will be envious!" observed the detective, grinning.

"Argus, I'm jittery. It seems as though some one's got a grudge against models and is out to annihilate us!" Ellen shuddered.

Argus spread the newspaper out on the table and turned to pages two and three. There was a reproduction of the room in which Syria Verne had been murdered and a diagram showing the position of the body as it lay on the floor at the base of a small table. He studied it closely. Beside the diagram was another full length "art photo" of Syria that left little to the imagination.

A waiter took their order.

"Think I'm getting an idea," said Argus.

"About what?"

"About Syria's murder."

"You mean who killed her?"

"No. How she was killed."

"Oh Argus, don't be such an—"

enigma!"

"Darling, my friends call me Public Enigma No. 1."

"Tell me what you mean, Argus," she begged.

"I will. In due time."

"Do you think that both murders were committed by the same person?" Ellen asked.

"Probably," Argus bent over the paper. "Do you think Roger Flagg could have been in love with Syria?"

"Absurd! Roger never pays any attention to any of his models."

"He must be missing a lot, then. What do you know about him, anyway?"

"Why he—why—" Ellen looked bewildered. "I never thought about it before, but now I realize I don't know—much."

"And Sturgis?"

"He comes from Boston. Back Bay, I believe."

The waiter set a thick steak down in front of them. Argus and Ellen watched closely as he sliced it slantwise into half-inch slices, then dunked them in the butter sauce flecked with charcoal from the steak's exterior—black on the outside and rare in the center.

"Boy! What a steak!" exclaimed Argus in genuine admiration.

French fried onions and a salad accompanied the steak. Argus and Ellen munched in silence for the next twenty minutes, much too preoccupied to talk.

Ellen's eye caught the full-length picture of Syria in the newspaper beside Argus and observed, "She's certainly giving the tabloids a field day! What did she have that I don't have?"

"She was a wonderful cook," said Argus blandly.

"I'll bet she couldn't even boil an egg!" snapped Ellen.

"You're wrong. She could even scramble them. Many's the morning she cooked breakfast and—"

He watched Ellen with amusement out of the corner of his eye.

"Oh!" she interrupted. "So it was like that." She paused. "The one thing I haven't asked you is why, do you think, she was murdered?"

"Jealousy. Blackmail."

"You mean you think Syria was blackmailing someone, too?"

Argus shrugged. "As for jealousy, we know that men made awful fools of themselves over her."

"Present company excepted, I suppose."

"All she had to do was lift her little finger and look at a man with that half-lidded glance of hers and he came running, bearing gifts."

"Beware of—I presume you gave her some solid little token of your esteem."

"A ring. A very small one. She probably traded it in as a first payment on a fur coat."

"I wish Lefty Conners were here."

"Was he a friend of Syria's, too?"

"No," said Argus. "Not that I know of." The detective lit a cigarette. "But he picks a lock prettier than any one I ever saw."

"Why do you want to pick a lock?" Ellen asked.

"Obviously because I haven't got a key."

"What I mean is, whose lock?"

"Syria Verne's."

"Why?"

"As I figure it, every one's been all wrong from the start about this murder. That's what I want to find out tonight."

"By going to her apartment?"

"Yes," Argus frowned in concentration. "On police duty, as it were."

Ellen removed a hairpin from a red curl. "In that case," she said, "I'd better go along, since I have my lock picking equipment with me."

"You mean you really know how?" Argus asked in surprise.

"Now I know I'll have to marry you. If there's one quality I admire in a woman, it's the ability to pick locks. But tell me, my little Raffles, where did you learn how?"

"My uncle taught me," said Ellen, getting out her compact and staring at herself in the tiny circular mirror.

"Your uncle?" echoed Argus.

"What's he? A second-story man?"

"No, silly, he's the best locksmith in Kinnegon Falls. Didn't I ever tell you about the time Mrs. Brown's son got locked in the bathroom and my uncle had to—"

"No," said Argus. "You must tell me sometime. I'll bet it's very interesting."

Ellen gave him a withering glance before saying, "Now, I'm ready for that little lock-picking."

Argus stopped at his apartment, leaving Ellen in the taxi. In a few minutes he returned, carrying a small camera and several flash bulbs.

"What gives?" Ellen asked.

"Oh, I thought we might want to take a snapshot or two," Argus answered.

There was a slight rain falling when they both stepped out of the cab in front of Syria Verne's apartment building.

"Ten," said Argus, when they were in the elevator. The car shot up.

"Say, didn't you have a murder here last night in the back stairway?"

"Yes," said the elevator boy.

"Any idea who did it?" the detective continued.

"Nope," said the boy.

"Did Miss Verne have a lot of men friends?"

"Yep."

"How about women?"

"Nope."

The elevator doors swung open. Ellen and Argus got out. The door shut.

"Talkative fellow," commented Argus. "Must come from Vermont."

He looked around him. They were standing in a long hall with doors on each side.

"I thought she lived in the penthouse," said Ellen.

"So she does, angel. What I'm looking for is the back stairway."

"They climbed three flights of stairs. Ellen began to pant.

"Come on," urged Argus. "Just one more."

They came to a door marked "Penthouse, Service Entrance."

"Seems to me you're doing a little puffing too, or is that asthma?" Ellen asked.

Argus ignored her. "Let's see how fast you can pick that lock, Miss Valentine."

Ellen removed a long hairpin from her hair and inserted it.

Argus glanced at his watch. "Get ready, get set, go! See if you can beat Lefty Conner's time. He can pick a simple lock like this one in a minute."

Ellen struggled. The seconds lengthened into minutes as she bent over the lock, adjusting the hairpin from time to time. Finally there was a slight click. She turned the knob and pushed open the door.

"How did I do?" she asked.

"Well enough to get a reward!"

The detective lifted Ellen bodily and kissed her on the lips. Then he consulted his watch again. "Not bad. You took three minutes and twenty seconds." He stepped inside and stood listening in the dark.

"It's all right. Come on." He took a flashlight from his pocket and they moved stealthily through the kitchen and pantry toward the front of the apartment.

MAYOR STEWART WILL COME HERE NEXT TUESDAY

James Garfield Stewart Will Be Honored at Reception, Committee Meeting

The Republican committee here is today perfecting plans for James Garfield Stewart's visit here next Tuesday. Garfield, mayor of Cincinnati, is candidate for the Republican nomination for governor at the May 9 primaries.

Republican Chairman LeRoy Carr said an informal open-house reception for Stewart from 3 to 5 P. M. Tuesday at the Washington Hotel would be open to everyone.

Stewart will arrive in Washington C. H. late Monday night, Carr said. A tour of the business section and factories here has been arranged for Tuesday morning.

The Cincinnati Mayor is serving his fourth term in that office now. His first public office was as a member of the city council in the Queen City in 1933. In Cincinnati, the mayor is chosen by council and Stewart was first accorded with that honor in 1938.

Stewart is a graduate of Kenyon College and Cincinnati Law School. He began law practice in his native city, Springfield, and later moved his offices to Cincinnati. For a time he taught at Cincinnati Law School and Cincinnati YMCA Night Law School.

ACCOUNTS RECEIVABLE"

Dollars that are temporarily "tied up" in ACCOUNTS RECEIVABLE can be made active and productive by the simple expedient of using such accounts as security for a commercial loan through this bank. This modern borrowing plan, which is finding ever increasing acceptance, has the effect of IMMEDIATELY RELEASING funds of a business that would not otherwise be available for use until the accounts pledged had been paid.

Working capital structures are thus maintained in more liquid conditions, and money which would otherwise be dormant is permitted to flow freely through the business. "Turn-over" is facilitated and many other advantages may accrue. We make many loans of this type . . . and are often able to provide a SAVING IN COST of this service. We invite conferences on the subject.

OPA CHECKING 'GAS' COUPON ENDORSEMENTS

Some New Cars Will Be Available This Year, OPA Says

Be sure all of your gasoline coupons are endorsed immediately. That was the advice to motorists from the county's War Price and Ration Board, where it was disclosed that the Office of Price Administration is planning a nationwide spot check of motorists' coupon books during this week.

The enforcement campaign is conducted by OPA investigators at filling stations and is another move to break up the black market in gasoline.

"Gasoline black market has reached alarming proportions in recent weeks. Diversion of gasoline into the black market means that legitimate civilian drivers are being deprived of essential fuel," the chairman said.

The mileage rationing regulations require all motorists to endorse all coupons with the license number and state of registration of the car immediately upon receipt of coupons from the rationing board.

Help of filling stations and distributors has also been enlisted by the OPA in the anti-Black Market campaign. Distributors will screen out all unendorsed and otherwise improper coupons when exchanged by filling stations. In turn, the amount of gallonage represented by the unendorsed and improper coupons will be charged back to the filling stations, which will lose that amount from their inventories.

Because of this, it is imperative that filling station operators and attendants require all coupons to be endorsed, the chairman said.

Inductees' Autos

Any prospective soldier who has received a certificate of fitness, form ESS 216 from Selective Service, under a new ruling may obtain board authorization to sell his 1942 car to anyone, regardless of whether or not the buyer has a ration certificate the ration board here said. Purpose of the order is to allow the man about to be inducted all possible opportunities to dispose of his car as quickly and as conveniently as possible.

New Cars Available

Ninety-six new passenger automobiles and 93 new bicycles will be available for rationing to civilians in March in the Columbus OPA district including Fayette County, the ration board here announced.

The March automobile quota applies only to new 1942 cars, whereas previously both new and used 1942 cars were included in the monthly quotas. While used 1942 cars will still be subject to rationing, issuance of certificates will not be restricted by quotas, it was explained.

Starting March 1, rationing certificates for new 1942 cars will be issued on the basis of most immediate need by OPA district offices. The board here will continue to accept applications sending those which they approve to the district office.

The chairman said any person who has found a used 1942 car for sale will be able to get a ration certificate from the War Price and Rationing Board to buy it. Persons who have passed their physical fitness test and are about to be inducted may obtain their board authorization to sell their 1942 used car to anyone regardless of whether the buyer has a ration certificate.

"These revisions are being made," OPA said, "to permit freer movement of used 1942 cars, while at the same time distributing the small remaining supply of new cars by means of monthly quotas to persons with the most essential needs."

There are only 10,000 new passenger automobiles available for rationing in the entire nation.

4-H Party

Mr. Bruce Tom, head of the State Recreation Department, has said, "Our big problem is teaching people to live with each other and recreation is the most efficient means of attaining this comradeship of man." To foster that idea of having wholesome fun together here at Jeffersonville, the county 4-H Recreation Group, headed by Ed Davis of Good Hope, sponsored a folk game party in the high school gym, Monday night. It was conducted by the county agent, Mr. Montgomery, who was assisted by Miss Beaver and Mrs. Dunkle. Fun and laughter prevailed from the first grand march to the last quadrille. Cookies and apples were the "Pause That Refreshes," when served at the intermission. All those who enjoyed the evening were cordially invited to share more fun with the group at Washington C. H. in a few weeks.

Jim Jeffries Now Trains In Garden

By HOWARD HEYN
BURBANK, Calif., March 9.—(AP)—James J. Jeffries, husky former world's featherweight champion and one of the dwindling tribe whose fame harks back to the era of iron-fisted fighters, is pugilist's man with the hoe.

A rancher now, Jeffries has neither forgotten nor discarded the prime element in his success formula—training. Harsh, grueling training helped him forge the boxing crown he wore for six years, and the 68-year-old ex-titholder keeps in condition by cultivating the sizeable victory garden on his acreage here.

His interest in boxing is as lively as ever, and he even helps along his conditioning program with an occasional turn or two in the gymnasium at Jeffries barn, the stable for young fighters he maintains.

With other oldtimers of the ring, Jeffries is convinced boxing's current specimens would be easy picking for the pugilists of his day. When Jeffries was on his way up he thought nothing of 14 miles of roadwork a day. He punched a bag with his left hand alone for 10 minutes at a stretch.

Jim whipped Bob Fitzsimmons twice, the first time for the championship in 1899. He knocked out Jim Corbett twice. He effectively subdued Sailor Tom Sharkey and Gus Ruhlin among others.

Baseball Preliminaries Progress

By JACK HAND
NEW YORK, March 9.—(AP)—Eleven more major league baseball players put their names on the dotted line of 1944 contracts, two more were given 4-F draft classifications, two others were called for pre-induction physical examinations and Catcher Hal Wagner of the Philadelphia A's announced plans of becoming a part-time pitcher.

former as spring training sessions loomed up only four days away. While the clubs were getting generally satisfying news, Pitcher Jim Bagby of the Cleveland Indians was continuing his personal feud with Manager Lou Boudreau by asking for "voluntary retirement for the duration."

Vice-President Roger Peckinpaugh of the Indians, said he had not received any request from Bagby but "if Jim wants to retire, all we can do is put our O. K. on it and pass it along to Judge Landis."

Bagby was the most outspoken in his dissatisfaction as he applied for an examination for the Merchant Marine, although many "name" players still are outside the fold.

'COONS FROM FLORIDA BEING RELEASED HERE

Members of the year-old Fayette County Coon Hunters Association today approached the climax of its first major project with the feeling that it represents a job well done and the objective reached.

During the past months, the association put on field trials, with profit-taking lunch and soft drink stands as a sideline, to raise money to be added to the membership fees for creating a fund with which to stock the county with raccoons.

Less than a month ago, the first of 50 coons arrived from Florida. They were described as "strong and rangy animals, a little bigger and a lighter yellowish color" than the home-grown animals.

Today the last two of four shipments is now in a cage awaiting liberation this week end.

The first 24 to arrive in two shipments of a dozen animals each, have been set free. Members of the association took them to different parts of the county and placed them mostly along creeks and, wherever possible, on what they called "den trees" which had been spotted during the past season's chases. Several of the coons had to be "chased" up the trees which were intended for their future homes, it was said.

A similar procedure will be followed when the remaining 26 are set free.

The coons, came from the woods of Florida, in an assortment of sizes and ages. There were both males and females and the association members explained that they expected the imported animals to intermingle with these here and by-cross-breeding strengthen the strain.

The coons cost the association approximately $7 apiece delivered here.

Mexican Batter Returns to U. S. And Takes Title

By FRANK FRAWLEY

HOLLYWOOD, March 9.—(AP)—Discouraged by a split-decision loss to Luther (Sluggo) White here last summer and inability to get a lightweight championship bout, Juan Zurita returned to his native Mexico City, determined not to box in the United States again.

Today he holds the NBA title. He whipped the clever, rugged and stout-hearted Sammy Angott last night in Hollywood baseball park. It marked the first time in Sammy's long career that he had lost a fight at the lightweight limit.

But Sammy lost, and he lost by a wide margin. After the first round, when Zurita seemed puzzled by the titleholder's style of attack, the Mexican settled down, took the aggressive, and beat the Pennsylvania Italian to the punch through the next 14 rounds.

Officials Named For Cage Tourneys
COLUMBUS, March 9.—(AP)—Officials who will work regional basketball tournaments next week were announced by H. R. Townsend, commissioner of the Ohio High School Athletic Association, as:

One-minute Sports Page
The Tigers' Jack Zeller wonders why Michigan doesn't hold a state high school baseball tournament and offers to donate Briggs Stadium, handle the expenses of the teams and furnish equipment for such an event.

Ernie Caverly of Rhode Island State averaged 26.7 points a game for the basketball season.

Earl Hilligan, the American League publisher, says his circuit has ordered fewer baseballs this year than in other seasons.

Today's Guest Star
Jere R. Hayes, Dallas, Tex., Times-Herald: "Tony (Two-Ton) Galento has been accepted for 'limited service' by the army and is peevish because Uncle Sam doesn't think move of his physical qualifications. As a matter of fact, a lot of folks figure Tony a 4-F in the boxing ring."

'CONSERVE GAS' HILL WARNS AS MERCURY DIVES

Consumers Asked To Use Fuel Sparingly, Factories Curtail Use 50 Per Cent

With another sharp dip in temperature, consumers here are once more asked to conserve gas to avert a genuine shortage. F. E. Hill, manager of the Dayton Power and Light Company, said today.

"Manufacturers have already been asked to curtail their consumption 50 per cent on Thursday and their cooperation has been fine," Hill said. He added similar sparing use by consumers would help keep gas pressure up for essential uses.

In other emergencies this year, Hill has recommended shutting off unused rooms, cooking oven dinners, not using the oven to heat the room, pulling down window shades at night and other measures to conserve gas.

"We can't call each individual consumer and ask them to use their gas sparingly now—but it is essential that they observe methods of conservation we have suggested."

BRITISH ABOUT TO BACK TITO DIPLOMATICALLY

WASHINGTON, March 9—(AP)—Signs that the British government is about to back Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) with diplomatic as well as military support multiplied here today with the disclosure that King Peter of Yugoslavia is expected to go to London soon.

Responsible sources said the Allies have gone as far as they can in sending Tito military aid without prejudicing their relations with the Yugoslav government-in-exile, toward which the partisan leader has declared his hostility.

Catherine the Great of Russia was neither Russian nor named Catherine—she was born in Stettin, Germany, and christened Sophia.

NEW RESTAURANT TO OPEN SATURDAY

Rosemary Dennison Wins Naming Contest

Tommy's Restaurant, so named by Miss Rosemary Dennison, 506 South North Street, will open for business Saturday morning, Tom Maddux, proprietor of the new restaurant, at 116 West Court Street, east of Dale's, said.

Miss Dennison's name was selected by the judges after a long session over nearly 300 submitted to receive the $5 prize offered by Maddux. Newly decorated in a tan and blue color scheme, Tommy's Restaurant will serve twice as many people as Maddux's former restaurant, the Skyscraper. New fixtures and dishes are set up for booth, counter and table service.

Maddux says he will specialize in meals and short orders. His new place of business will be open seven days a week.

SLOW OR FAST? TIME WILL TELL, MANAGER SAYS

City Council To Pass on Time Change Measure March 22

Whether or not Washington C. H. will turn its clocks up an hour to go back on "fast" time April 1, depends on what the majority of people want, Walter L. Stambaugh, city manager, said today.

Stambaugh said he had received communications from Wilmington, Circleville and Chillicothe suggesting each town go on the same time as the others.

"I plan to contact business men, professional men and the schools to see what they want before council takes action on the question March 22," Stambaugh said. He was named to conduct the canvass at the council meeting Wednesday night.

Hillsboro Council passed an emergency ordinance last June which provides for "slow," or Central War Time from September 30 to March 31 and "fast" or Eastern War Time from April 1 to September 30 for the village.

MERCURY NEAR ZERO READING

Lowest Point 8 Above at Early Hour Thursday

The mercury dropped to 8 above zero, at a late hour Wednesday night, after reaching 18 at 9 P.M. and then rebounded to 12 above at 8 A.M. Thursday.

A year ago 25 was the maximum and zero the minimum, so that weather at that time was colder than at the present time.

The low reading Wednesday night occurred after a windy, biting cold day, during which snow fell off and on throughout much of the day, and at times assumed proportions of a blizzard.

COUNTY MISSES WAR BOND DRIVE GOAL BY $14,000

E Bond Quota Oversubscribed, Federal Reserve Figures Show

Fayette County missed its Fourth War Loan by $14,554, just-received Federal Reserve figures show. The total for the county is $890,446 as compared with the $906,000 goal.

F. E. Hill, chairman of the War Finance Committee here, said the E bond goal was oversubscribed, although the overall quota was not met. The primary purpose of the first half of the drive was to sell E bonds. In all, $415,571 worth of E bonds were sold—the quota here was $379,000.

Total bond purchases were 6,852—representing an estimated 40 per cent of the county's population, Hill said.

The greatest shortage in the break-down showed up in sales to individuals. The quota was $681,000 and only $587,727 worth of bonds is credited to individual purchases. "The corporations, businesses and organizations held up their end of the goal—the individuals were the ones who fell down," Hill commented.

Coble-Hagwood Vows Exchanged Friends here are learning of the marriage of Evelyn Grace Coble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Allen Coble, colored, to Tech-Sgt. Harold Hagwood, of Cambridge, Mass.

The bride wore the traditional wedding gown of white satin and was attended by her sisters, Barbara and Joyce Coble, when the vows were exchanged March 6. Officiating was Rev. Mrs. E. A. Crosswhite.

The newly-weds are now in Cambridge, Mass., where the bridegroom is studying engineering at Harvard University.

POET'S CORNER

WISHFUL THINKING

One lovely Sunday morning, when all the world was fair, A tiny four-leaf clover was voicing its despair.

"Oh dear!" it said, to others whose leaves were numbered three, "Will no one ever come this way and kindly notice me?"

"I've heard that four-leaf clovers, while not entirely rare, Are emblems of good fortune and are fondly plucked with care. I would, that some fair maiden, out walking with her love Would spy me and would place me within her shoe or glove."

Or if some statelier Madam, whose thoughts were more devout Were walking with her husband to the church that's here-about, If only she would see me, and within her book of prayer— Between the leaves would fold me, I would be happy there.

And then if in the future just she alone remains To continue on life's pathway, I would help her once again To recall the happy memories of this lovely Sabbath day When together, arm in arm, to church, they trod this pleasant way.

I would somehow manage to drop out from twixt those leaves of prayer And bring to mind the Sabbath day when all the world was fair. So Maid, or Madam—Come way! will! Along this pleasant way! I do so want to be a joy in someone's life today!

GRACE G. DICK

The above poem was inspired by the experience of a friend of Mrs. Dick, and member of the Poetry Group of the Columbus Women's Club. Mrs. Dick, explained in her letter accompanying the poem, that a four-leaf clover her friend had found on the way to church with her now-departed husband, recently had dropped out of the prayer book in which she had placed it. She said she remarked that it should be a thought for a verse or two. The above poem is the result of the suggestion.

Mrs. Dick wrote that "Spring
